Baltasar Gracián El Político

Bodegas San Alejandro is one of Spain's most respected cooperatives set up in the 1960s and with over 350 members and 900 hectares under vine. Altitude (over 1,000 metres above sea level in some plots), climate, soil and age of the vines means the wines are just too good to ignore. Protected by the Moncayo mountains, strong breezes help protect against disease while limited nutrients and water supply keeps yields down. They've had huge success in the US with the Las Rocas line which Robert Parker consistently scored over 90 points. For fruit-forward Garnacha with great acidity at an attractive price, the wines from San Alejandro are too good to ignore.

DOP Calatayud

Grape varieties: Garnacha

Soil: Slate and siltstone

Harvest: Manual harvest in the second week of October.

Winemaking: Fermented in stainless steel tanks for 20 - 25 days at 24 - 26°C.
